

What is Conformance Testing?

Conformance testing is more than a regulatory requirement, is performed to verify if the product meets some specified standards that have been developed for efficiency. It is usually performed by external organizations, which might be an external governing body to ensure that system is compliant.

The following activities are performed as part of conformance testing:

- Testing with approved testing methodologies
- Robust Testing process
- Effective Issue Resolution